

BUSCH'S GUNNERS ALL LOOK ALIKE TO GOATS

Perryman Annihilates His Jinx, While Goobar Leader is Forced to Send Brooks, Creiger and Morganrath to Bench in Order.

BY GUS MALBERT.

Emmett Keith Perryman, embryonic preacher, from Emory, Ga., came into his own yesterday. A most horrible jinx has been following the attenuated young man ever since he doffed the clay-baked uniform furnished him in Danville to don the natty attire which was awaiting him here. That jinx is now buried beneath tons and tons of happiness. For Perry has won a ball game, and his clerical proclivities may now take a rest, for he is due to stay in baseball for some time to come. The count was 7 to 5.

To add to the young man's triumph, the victory was achieved over those sanguinary scufflers for baseball supremacy from over Appomattox way. And what should complete the cup of joy is that Heine Busch had to parade three of his hurling staff, and at the finish substitute his left fielder for Pitcher Morganrath in order to stem the onslaughts of the Colts.

Perry took the game in the second inning after Bussey, who started, had been driven to cover, the first two Goobers facing him landing for good, stiff clouts. Harvey had not fared well in the opener, a triple and two singles being charged against him before the lid had been pried off good, so Steve determined to relieve him of the onery task.

Slow at Beginning.

From the beginning the game was slow. The men appeared tired and there was never any hustle about the play. Jessie Reynolds, who at times was more like the real Jesse James, was umpiring, and he made a hit with neither the audience nor the ball players. Off on balls and strikes, he allowed entirely too much argument to put anybody, and he seemed to feature his work was that both clubs suffered, which is stating some paradox. Before the game was over it was time to put out the candles, and at least the ninth inning was played while it was too dark to see the finish of a two and one-half hour session.

In anticipation of a real battle, the very largest Thursday crowd of the season was on hand. Young America was in force as the spectators of the management, and they made themselves heard, though there was mighty little to arouse any enthusiasm until late in the day. The victory was freakish and just as much the result of luck as of superior playing on the part of the winning club.

Steady Loser.

Perryman started like a sure loser. Though the game was handed to him at a rather precarious stage, he did little to improve conditions, and before he was able to send all of the visitors home, he had been driven to cover. He was substituted, John Creiger being the gunner named. His slants were effective, for, with Perry on second, the locals were unable to score.

Some of this was due to Perry himself. Instead of watching the play he sat at the time one with his hat to center and was followed by Perryman with a double to the fence, which scored Willie. Busch thought quickly, and the result of his brainwork was that Brooks was yanked and another pitcher, Carter, came in to replace him. Carter hit, but he was substituted, John Creiger being the gunner named. His slants were effective, for, with Perry on second, the locals were unable to score.

That Fatal Seventh.

Creiger got along fairly well in the sixth, no runs coming across, but the Waterloo happened in the seventh, and Creiger was sent to know his cover. Carter was walked, and Creiger followed with a double, which sent Carter to third. Griffin hit over third so fast that Howdell couldn't possibly handle it. Carter counted, and Graf took third. With first and third filled and nobody out, Busch was again forced to change his pitcher, and, hoping to fare better, he substituted Morganrath, another speedster wonder. But the blonde twirler lasted only a few minutes. He walked Burke, filling the sacks, and Riley hit just inside first base, which scored Graf and Morganrath sent to third. Still nobody out. Having exhausted his pitching staff, Busch was compelled to bring in Blackstone from left and send Morganrath to that position. He might have fared better had he done this in the first instance. Tennant, who had been in the game since the first, was walked, and Busch pulled an exquisite squeeze, which scored Burke and let Riley go to third, having advanced to second on Tennant's out. When Morganrath pitched to the roller, Riley scored, and Perryman ended the inning by grounding to Morganrath. Five runs, with three hits, was the result, and it meant the ball game.

The Goobers were out in order in the eighth and ninth. The day was dark, and the crowd anxious to go home, after seeing more different kinds of things than are usually furnished in a week of games. The score:

McCombs Started Final Tally.

McCombs started the final tally for the Goobers by leading Blackstone's grounders. Laughlin rightly sacrificed and Barnett's single to center turned the trick. That was all the scoring done by the Goobers. Perry had them strictly within row during the other periods.

Colts Came With a Hush.

Though starting late, the Colts came with a hush and overcame their adversaries. Two hits were responsible for the first count, which made a blank out of the question. Harvey Brooks, until the fourth, was making monkeys of the Colts with a slow ball which at most times had nothing whatever on it, coasting up in wind style. But the locals were unable to time their blows and very few were other a loft to the outfield or a mealy tap to the infield.

Burke was the first to connect, hitting a slam to center. Riley grounded from second to first and Tennant hit to left. Burke going to third. On the throw-in Tennant started for second, but was caught in between first and second, and while he was

MARQUARD WINS PITCHING DUEL

Rube Is Back at Top of Stride and Works in Brilliant Form.

Only Count for Pirates Is Gibson's Four-Base Slam in Third.

New York, August 8.—Marquard and Hendrix fought one of the greatest pitching duels of the year today, and Marquard won in the tenth by the count of 2 to 1. The Rube was back at the top of his stride, working brilliantly to the finish, but Hendrix stuck with him across each round, giving the Giants double occasional wildness. Gibson's four-base slam to deep left-center was the only count on Marquard. Single by Shoeness and Murray broke up the game in the tenth. The score:

SORRY SPECIMEN OF BASEBALL GAME

Norfolk Tars Defeat Portsmouth in Very Ragged Exhibition.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]

Norfolk, Va., August 8.—About as sorry a specimen of baseball as one cares to see was the first of the series between Norfolk and Portsmouth this afternoon. There were hits, salore and numerous errors reaped. Verbut was batted out of the box in the second inning, after six runs had been made by the Tars. The final score was 11 to 5. The score:

CUBS TAKE FAREWELL GAME

Philadelphia, August 8.—The Cubs landed the farewell game of the series with the Phillies 7 to 6. Hitting in the pinches did the trick for the Cubs. Each side made ten hits, but those of the Reds were better placed. The home folks won the game, and the effort to stop the visitors. Archer's homer, with a run on base, in the seventh, disposed of Earl. The eighth and ninth were quiet, and was split between the two clubs.

Boshes vs. Turner

Abie Boshes, the Gotham lightweight scrapper, writes that he will be here Monday night to meet Joe Turner in a handicap match at the hotel and Turner has agreed to throw Boshes three times in an hour, no rest to be taken between falls. Boshes writes that he is in the best of shape, training at Coney Island on "red hot." Says Abie: "I'll admit that he (Turner) is the best middleweight in the world, but I'll be there with bells on, and he will have to go some to throw me three times in one hour." It should prove a most interesting match.

DODGERS ARE TRIMMED

Brooklyn, August 8.—St. Louis trimmed the Dodgers 4 to 1 in the last game of the series. Although Rubeen managed to keep his hits scattered, Oake's homer in the ninth was a combination of a single and a walk. Both sides held their own in the game. Both sides held their own in the game.
